

terrible night. None can forget it, those who have sat beneath the matchless and melodious voice of Henry and listened to the burning of the drums to the sound of his voice. We had planned so much on him, staked our last resources on his vocal power, only to lose him. Hank and his friends were there, but they were not to be. It was fate. It was fate. We had lost too loudly. We had lost without knocking wood of the resounding glories of that voice.

That was what happened: The Democrats of this country were about to assemble in convention for the purpose of ratifying the choice of the People's Choice, that choice should be named for President for the third weary time. They had selected Denver for their rallying place, and raised their banners. Certain preliminaries were to be observed. One was the selection of a permanent chairman to register the convention's will. The wise men of the Democracy—if so there be—were anxious in their choice. Henry D. Clayton was the man. He had the vote. He could make all the vast assemblage hear. So they chose Henry.

He keynoted in a manner that resounded you of a salute of one hundred and one guns. He made such other speeches as were necessary—a few hundred now and then—and that matchless voice remained true to all advances. The vast assembly heard him, heard him to the consequent echoes of scores of patriots and hundreds of observers. They came the night of nights. The nomination was to be made. Pardon me if I say night of nights. It was the night of nights and the morning of mornings, for so many speechmakers desired to second the nomination of the Peerless Leader that the obsequies ran along until the sun rose above Pike's Peak, if the sun does rise above Pike's Peak, a matter of which I have no record. Anyhow it should rise there.

Gus Thomas tore up a pine tree and wrote the name of William Jennings Bryan on the burning sky in letters of fire. Ollie James traced the progress of Mr. Bryan round the world until he got him in Buckingham Palace, where the King took of his jeweled diadem and cast it at his—Bryan's—poor, poor feet. Two hundred and forty-seven other orators, more or less, performed similar stunts, and then came the crucial moment. All the orators talked themselves and the convention to frazzles. The vote! What said the convention? How had it recorded the will of the Democracy?

Well, you can search anybody who was there, for at that exact moment the voice of Henry D. Clayton failed; petered out, vanished, vanished. He had no voice. He had no whisper. All he could do was to stand there, gasp and make signs. How about that for a tragedy? Can you beat it? You cannot, you positively cannot. You cannot even tie it, in all the histories of the tragic moments of this world, from the time Eve ate the apple to the day when John D. Rockefeller discovered that the Supreme Court did not consider him a benevolent old party, but did consider him a combination in restraint of trade.

He is a nice round man, with a round face, a round paunch and a calm and cheerful smile. As I said, you would pick him out for a cherub any day. But he is not mislead. Within Henry, somewhere behind that bland and cherubic face, there reposes The Voice. Reposes, did I say? A lapse, a palpable lapse. It does not repose. It comes forth in all its majesty, and roars until the foundations of the very ramparts of the universe itself quake and quiver when assaulted by its vast outpouring—Saturday Evening Post.

For 6 doses of Kin-Lax will cure any case of biliousness.

It did not fail him. After the first speaker had responded to the toast, "The Day We Celebrate," Henry spoke for another thirty minutes in introducing the next one. There were plenty of speakers and Henry gave each one a good send-off, half an hour of introduction being the allotment, but, in the case of an especially distinguished guest, forty-five minutes being considered none too much.

It was three o'clock in the morning when blind Senator Gore was introduced, and the winter sun had gilded the dome of the library before Henry turned them loose. At the close he was going strong. His voice was as resonant and as powerful as it was when he began. Denver was forgotten. The voice was again supreme.

But Henry is not all voice. Perish that thought! That marvelous organ is backed by a heap of brains. He is now chairman of the Judiciary Committee, where he has for many years the ranking Democrat when the Republicans were in control. He is now serving his eighth term in Congress and has a solid reputation for legal ability, courage and simon-pure Democracy. He was born in his district in 1857, had a term in the Alabama Legislature, and was United States district attorney from 1893 to 1896.

Judge Jones' Reply To Comer Stirs Up Ire Of Rufus Kolb.

Montgomery, Sept. 20.—Action of Judge Thomas G. Jones, former governor of Alabama, in jumping out of the Comer frying pan has landed him into the Kolb fire, according to rumors of war brewing in this city as a result of a statement published by Judge Jones on Sunday morning in that statement Judge Jones sought to explain the stormy political period in Alabama history from 1892 to 1894, when he was governor, but in doing so he has enraged Capt. R. F. Kolb, present commissioner of agriculture, who at that stormy time was independent candidate for governor.

Judge Jones' statement was primarily in answer to former Gov. B. B. Comer, who stated several weeks ago that Judge Jones, because of a faulty election count, was not rightfully governor in 1892-94, but that rather Captain Kolb, his opponent, was elected. Judge Jones refuted the Comer attacks, and set forth, what he termed the history of the two years. But in doing this he has enraged Captain Kolb, who now gives out that he is preparing a statement which will prove to the people that he, Kolb, was elected to office by a majority ranging anywhere from 50,000 to 60,000.

Joe Furlow Burned to Death.

Troy Messenger.

News was received here shortly after noon today by J. E. Carroll, that Joe Furlow, formerly a warehouseman in Troy, had been burned to death at his home in Louisiana. Further particulars were not given.

Mr. Furlow moved from Montgomery some months ago to Vivian, Louisiana, in the oil well section of that State.

A letter has just been received here from him that it was in that connection some way that his clothing became ignited.

Mr. Furlow was well known to the people of Pike and was a splendid man. His death will be much regretted. He has two brothers residing near Henderson.

Until a few days ago his son was connected with the Faulk stable at this city, but he is now in South Carolina.

Mr. Furlow's death will be heard with sorrow by his many friends here.

Harry C. Gunnels Dies In Atlanta.

Montgomery Journal.

Harry Cunningham Gunnels, twice superintendent of education of Alabama, and one of the best known educators in the south, died in Atlanta at 9:15 o'clock on Monday morning. Death was unexpected, and was directly due to uremic poison, according to the meager information which was received in this city from the Georgia metropolis.

For several months Major Gunnels had been in declining health, directly due to recently discovered traces of pellagra, which in the past few weeks made rapid strides in the way of breaking down the educator's rugged constitution.

Up to a week ago, however, he was apparently in no more serious condition than he had been for several months. Early last week he was in the city shaking hands with numerous friends here.

On last Friday morning, Major Gunnels left for Atlanta, where he went to a sanitarium for treatment. His death early Monday morning was the first intimation which his many friends here had received of the serious turn to his illness.

Immediately upon receiving word of Major Gunnels' death, Mrs. Gunnels left for Atlanta, while a brother of the deceased, from Birmingham, left to join her in Atlanta. James Gunnels, another brother of the deceased, remained in Montgomery with the two young daughters of Major and Mrs. Gunnels.

It is expected that Major Gunnels' body will be buried at Oxford, though particulars of the funeral have not been announced.

Sketch of His Life.

Major Gunnels was born in Oxford, Calhoun county, Ala., October 1, 1865, a son of Daniel Perry and Susan E. (Cunningham) Gunnels. He was educated in the common schools of his native place and in 1880 took the degree of A. B. at Oxford College. He took a special course at Vanderbilt University and later attended the University of Alabama where he graduated in 1891 with the degree of LL.D. Although a graduate in law, his entire life was given over to educational work, excepting one term as a member of the legislature 1900-01.

In October 1886, he began teaching as co-principal of the Ashland High School; he was later professor of Natural Science and History in Oxford College for two years; he was principal of the Anniston High School; and he was superintendent of the Anniston city schools 1896-98.

In 1899 he was appointed chief clerk in the state educational department under John W. Abernethy, who, at that time, was state superintendent of education. In June, 1902, Dr. Abernethy was elected president of University of Alabama, whereupon Major Gunnels was appointed to fill out Dr. Abernethy's unexpired term.

Appointed to Office.

Upon the election of I. W. Hill as superintendent of education for the term beginning in 1903, Major Gunnels was again appointed chief clerk in the educational department. He served in this department until 1907 when he became state superintendent of education, having been elected to this office the previous fall. He remained as superintendent until last January when he was succeeded by H. J. Willingham.

During his legislative term, Major Gunnels served as a member of the house committee on education and he was author of the bill providing for five months' suit.

free school. He was chairman of the committee on legislation of the Alabama Education committee; and director for Alabama of the Southern Educational Association.

Major Gunnels was successively lieutenant and captain of Co. "I," of the Second infantry regiment, and from 1890 to 1906 was inspector with the rank of Major on the staff of Brigadier General Louis V. Clark. He was a democrat, a member of the Methodist church, a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Shriner and a Knight of Pythias.

On November 25, 1895, Major Gunnels married Miss Sadie Emily Goss, of Commerce, Ga.

Would Impeach the Sheriff of Cullman.

Cullman, Ala., Sept. 19.—Charged him with corruption in office, C. W. Bryce, Sheriff of Cullman County, was recommended for impeachment by the grand jury in their final report submitted to Judge D. W. Speake this afternoon. The report submitted this afternoon as a result of a special charge given the grand jury last Saturday morning by Judge Speake relative to the rumors that have been in circulation in Cullman for the past several days, charging that Mr. Bryce had attempted to barter away the office of the sheriff of this county. He was also indicted by the grand jury for the offense.

The report of the grand jury this afternoon comes as a great surprise to the friends of the sheriff and the sheriff himself. It is the source of much comment in the city and surrounding country. The rumors grew out of the contest case over the sheriff's office and the fact that Mr. Bryce sought to dismiss the mandamus case against Judge Burke. This action could not be understood by the people and sentiment was at such a state until Judge Speake ordered an investigation by the Grand Jury Saturday morning of which their report this afternoon is a result.

The Real Man heard of it and was very sorry for her, and tried in a nice way to show it. Melted by his sympathy, Eve wept a few instinctive tears, which hurt the Real Man and made him angry. "Why don't you get a divorce?" he asked.

Eve wanted to say: "Because

An Endless Chain.

By Adele Luchman In Smart Set.

Eve had been born with an instinct to tell the truth, which was a mean advantage to take of a helpless infant. Then her Mother had rubbed it in by teaching her that it was wicked to tell lies, and that if she did it God would love her and the Devil would certainly get her. Eve believed it.

But when she was five years old Eve made the acquaintance of Consequences. One day she knocked a vase off a table and it broke. Her Mother came in and said: "Eve, did you do that?"

Eve looked straight into her Mother's eyes and said, "Yes, Mother."

Her Mother spanked her. Eve cried a little, then, remembering that God loved her and the Devil wouldn't get her, she stopped.

One day she played with her Mother's tortoiseshell comb and broke it. Her Mother found it and asked "Eve, did you do that?"

Eve's instinct was to say "Yes," but she remembered the spanking, so she looked straight into her Mother's eyes and said, "No, Mother."

Her Mother believed her, because Eve had a good reputation. She had bought it with a spanking.

Then her Mother said it must have been the maid; so she dismissed the maid and gave Eve a piece of cake.

Eve ate the cake and reflected that it was also Consequences and didn't hurt when you sat down. She reflected, moreover, that the Devil was slow in arriving. She forgot that God didn't love her if she did it. God wouldn't love her and the Devil would certainly get her. The Child believed it.

One day the child pulled a costly statuette of the drawing room (table and broke it. "Did you do that?" Eve asked.

The Child looked straight into Eve's eyes and said: "Yes, Mother."

And Eve spanked her.

Roast O'Neal At Falkville.

Decatur, Ala., Sept. 19.—Many of the prohibitionists of the little town of Falkville, this county, are quite indignant with Governor Emmet O'Neal, accusing him of trying to influence the voters of that precinct to vote a wet ticket, in the recent local option election held in this county. They accuse the Governor of sending the following telegram to leaders of the wets:

"If the Morgan County election goes wet, I will not appoint excise commissioners for the little town of Falkville unless petitioned to do so by a majority of the citizens. I understand that it is a small rural community without police protection."

Emmet O'Neal, "Governor."

Falkville gave a dry majority, this vote being prohibition 105, saloons 56. It is an incorporated town and has a Mayor and Board of Aldermen and police protection.

The prohibitionists of the place, boiling over with indignation for the Governor, telegraphed the Governor the following:

"The good people of Falkville resent your attempt to interfere in our local option election, and judging by the vote cast here our people have no more confidence in your promise now than we had before your election."

This telegram was signed by A. G. Patterson and 100 other citizens of Falkville.

It is claimed that Governor O'Neal's telegram was sent before the local option election and was intended to influence the people to vote wet.

I don't know much about it. I'd get it." But she sobbed. "I must bear it for my Child." The Real Man was greatly touched by her heroic self-sacrifice and loved her all the more. Then her Husband got drunker than ever before and tried to kill her. Instinct and reason agreeing for once, she left him and consulted a lawyer about a divorce. The day before the papers were filed, her Husband died in delirium tremens.

She hastened back to the conjugal roof and went to the funeral swathed in crape.

Her women friends wrote that their hearts bled for her and that they knew just how she felt.

They did indeed. They would have liked to write: "Congratulations! How much did he leave you?"

Eve replied, between the broadest of black margins, that the light of her life had gone out, but for her Child's sake she would make an effort to go on living.

What she thought was: "Now I'm going to live!"

The Real Man waited a decent interval, then offered his heart and hand.

Eve felt like saying flatly: "I'm a widow with money and without regret, and I would not marry the best man living."

But she told him with gentle sadness that her heart was buried in her Husband's grave.

The Real Man said she was the most truly womanly woman he had ever known and he never married.

Eve adored her Child, and brought her up in the way she should go. She taught that the Devil was wicked to tell lies, and that if she did it God wouldn't love her and the Devil would certainly get her. The Child believed it.

One day the child pulled a costly statuette of the drawing room (table and broke it. "Did you do that?" Eve asked.

We Plead Guilty!

Our esteemed friend, the Andalusia Star, in its last issue whacks us over the head with considerable vigor. We are the objects or subjects (or both) of its wrath on account of our commendation of Congressman Hobson's work against liquor and on account of our opposition to the liquor traffic in general. We have in our system a large lot of good arguments to justify our position. But to end the controversy speedily, we will plead guilty and take the biggest fine.

We admit that we are against local option elections or any other device whereby the people may be debauched by the saloon.

We confess that we believe that all men every where ought to stand for the right, regardless of party pronouncements of political praters.

We do not deny that we have opposed the liquor power in every guise; that we condemn it every where, from Maine to Alabama, from the Philippines to Porto Rico, and then some.

We plead guilty to believing that all earnest, honest men, who love humanity, who are for the right and against the wrong, ought to give their help wherever and whenever they can to the destruction of the damnable traffic in alcoholic liquors.

"If this be treason, make the most of it!"

Must Respect Law,

Montgomery Journal.

The Andalusia Star calls attention to the heavy fines put upon those who were recently tried in the city court of Andalusia for violating the various laws and says the "verdict stands for a better and cleaner and a higher citizenship."

A white farmer was given a fine of $250 for selling liquor and a white boy was fined $50 for fighting. Those are a few samples of what was given the violators of the law at Andalusia. During the two weeks the court was in session fines aggregating $2,500 were imposed and the Star says
"these fines are warnings that Covington county has tired of the old regime of nominal punishments. All laws must be respected. In the future, if you are convicted of law-breaking in Covington county you may expect to be punished almost to the limit."

The only way to make the law less inclined to respect the law is to give them a heavy sentence or fine when they are arrested. The man who continually violates the law and is released on a nominal fine doesn't object much to being tried again.

Maine Elections Close.

Augusta, Mo., Sept. 19.—After having completed the tabulation of the official returns on all four questions which appeared on the ballot at the special election a week ago, the Governor and council tonight adjourned until Thursday, September 23, when they will meet to consider corrections.

The results as announced today were as follows: On repeal of the constitutional prohibition amendment:
For repeal, 60,487; against repeal, 60,461.

Majority for repeal, 27.
The State-wide primary system was adopted by a majority of 44, 086.

The majority for locating the State Capitol permanently at Augusta was 18,354, and that for increasing the debt limit in cities of 40,000 and over, 530.

Attorney General Patagall stated tonight that the question of the repeal of the prohibitory amendment was still in doubt and it was his belief that corrections would show a considerable majority against repeal.

The time for receiving corrections would not expire until October 9.

Governor Plaisted said tonight that corrections would be made in the returns of the several towns which might materially alter the result.

Hyde Will Die For Murder of His Wife.

Anderson, S. C. Sept. 19.—Samuel K. Hyde, confessed murderer of his young wife and her father, was convicted by a jury late today and sentenced to be hanged. The death sentence will be pronounced by Judge Prince tomorrow morning.

The reading of the verdict had no visible effect on the prisoner, who said later that the finding was a just one, that he was guilty of murder and expected to be convicted. Under the laws of South Carolina, pleas of guilty in murder cases are forbidden.

The crime for which Hyde was convicted was committed on the night of the eighteenth of last July. While Mrs. Hyde and her sister, Willie Beasley, aged 15, lay asleep in one bed, and her parents, W. V. Beasley and wife, were asleep in another bed in same room, Hyde entered and fired three shots into his wife's body, killing her instantly and fired two times at her sister, both shots taking effect, but not seriously wounding her. Reloading his revolver, he shot and killed Beasley, who was attempting to disarm him.

Mrs. Beasley Star Witness.

Mrs. Beasley was the principal witness for the prosecution at the trial today, describing in detail the events on the night of the tragedy. Sheriff King told of Hyde surrendering to him and saying he planned the murder of his wife and was well pleased with the deed. The state rested its case at one o'clock and the defense introduced several witnesses who testified in support of the claim of the prisoner's counsel, that he was a victim of hereditary insanity.

Following the argument by the attorneys and the judge's charge, the jury retired and fifty-five minutes later returned a verdict of guilty.

Howie Is Fined For Striking Policeman.

Special to The Birmingham News.

Gadsden, Ala., Sept. 20.—J. T. Howie was found guilty Tuesday afternoon in the police court on a charge of assaulting an officer. He was fined $100. Four witnesses testified for the city that Howie struck Capt. W. H. Thornton in the face before the officer attempted to interfere or strike him. Howie testified that the officer struck him first.

Howie, a few months ago, was paroled by Governor O'Neal after he had been found guilty of violating the prohibition laws and sentenced to the road for a term of six months. The action of the governor resulted in an indignation meeting being held, at which the governor was denounced for issuing parole. Governor O'Neal has written for information regarding Howie's recent trouble, and it is possible that he will withdraw the parole, compelling Howie to serve his time.

Must Convict Whiskey Men.

Florence, Ala., Sept. 19.—Lauderdale County Circuit Court was convened Monday morning to try the criminal docket, which consists of about 165 cases, a large majority being against alleged illicit whiskey sellers. Judge Almon departed from his usual routine to charge the petit jury to do their duty in convicting this class of law breakers. He said he had found juries too eager to acquit in these cases and that he expected that they convict where the evidence justified. "If the juries would do their duty in these cases," he said, "there would be fewer murder cases to try, as 75 per cent. of the murder cases tried before me have been traceable to the illicit sale of whiskey."

Many a mother has learned of a way of avoiding sickness in her family, especially among the children, by the use of a free sample bottle of the famous laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This offer of the doctor's to send a free sample bottle has been responded to by thousands of women in all parts of America.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a truly wonderful laxative and especially adapted to the needs of babies and children because it is pleasant to taste and no child will refuse it. Then, it is mild and never gripe. It is all that a child's remedy should be, though it is a good laxative for the whole family because it is effective at all ages. It is not dynamic like salts, pills and powerful cathartics, which should not be given to children under any circumstances.

Nine times out of ten when a child complains and you don't know exactly what is the matter with it, it needs a laxative—its bowels are constipated. Syrup Pepsin will correct the trouble, tone up the child and soon it will be well again—wonderful results have been secured with Syrup Pepsin over night.

You can buy it of any druggist at fifty cents or a dollar a bottle, the latter being the family size, but you are invited to make a test of it first at the doctor's expense. Send him your address today and he will send you a free sample bottle direct to your home. Then when satisfied by it of your favorite druggist.

For the free sample address him, Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 402 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Majority Overwhelming.

At the election in August previous I carried the white counties of the state and most of them by overwhelming majorities. In the Black Belt counties I received as many white votes, if they had been honestly counted, as my opponent did. The colored people as a rule did not vote.

"I was accorded no manager at the polls in any of the Black Belt counties and yet it is well known and long since admitted how the returns from the Black Belt counties were held back for ten days after the election and doctored and falsely added to until large majorities running up into the thousands from most of those counties were given to my opponent."

"Judge Jones served as governor of this state for two terms. During his first term from 1890-92, he was generally known as 'His Accidency.' He enjoyed the honors of his last term and drew the salary, neither of which he was any more entitled to than the king of the Fiji Islands would have been. Every well informed citizen of this state knows that this is absolutely true and no one knows it better than Judge Thos. G. Jones himself. He has been told so many times and again by his former friends and supporters and thousands of his former friends have told me, that the part they took in perpetrating the frauds has been the regret of their lives and they would like to ease up their conscience by having an opportunity of voting for me for governor. Many of his old friends and supporters have made this acknowledgement over their own signatures which I have in my possession. Thousands more of his friends have so expressed themselves.

"Now in conclusion I want to repeat and emphasize it, that I very much regret that old political scores have been opened up and that too by a man occupying a high judicial position, even if he was appointed by a republican president. I am charitable enough to say that if Judge Thos. G. Jones is not in his dotage he is certainly afflicted with a case of 'Comer Insanity.'"

Senator H. E. Reynolds Dies in Birmingham.

Centerville, Ala., Sept. 22.—The people of this place were greatly shocked yesterday to learn of the death of Senator Herbert E. Reynolds, which occurred at an infirmary in Birmingham.

Senator Reynolds was one of the foremost and best beloved citizens in Bibb County. He was in the zenith of useful manhood, and his death is a distinct loss to Alabama.

He was born in Montevallo, and after finishing in the schools of his native town entered the State University and finished both the academic course and the law course of that institution. After completing the law course at the University he finished in law at the University of Virginia. After practicing law successfully for several years he engaged in the mercantile business with remarkable success and soon had one of the largest mercantile establishments in this part of Alabama.

Elected State Senator.

In 1907 he was elected State Senator for the Senatorial district composed of Bibb and Perry counties and served in the State Senate for four years with marked distinction. He was chairman of the committee on Education and championed the compulsory education bill. He was a man of the highest personal and religious character.

At the time of his death he was President of Bibb County Sunday School Association, and was superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School at this place.

Some years ago he was married to Miss Nora Leeper, eldest daughter of Judge John Leeper, of Shelby County. His widow, two sons, his father Captain H. C. Reynolds, and several brothers and sisters survive him.

He will be buried at the cemetery here on Saturday at 10 o'clock with Masonic honors.

Statement.

Captain Kolb's signed statement in full follows:

"I do not propose to inflict a long letter, such as Judge Thos. G. Jones and Gov. B. B. Comer indulged in, on the people of Alabama, or by a recital of the outrageous frauds perpetrated in this state during the memorable campaign in 1892 between Judge Thos. G. Jones and myself. It is all still fresh in the minds of those who took part in that contest and it is to be deeply deplored, that now Judge Thos. G. Jones, nearly twenty years later and when all our people are re-united and living in peace and harmony, should see fit, in order to vent his spleen on Gov. B. B. Comer, to open up old scores and in order to carry out his purposes, undertake to convince the people of Alabama, that he was honestly elected governor of this state in 1892. Judge Jones is fooling nobody but himself and it will be a hard matter for him to convince anyone, who is at all familiar with the political history of this state during those stormy days, that his statements in this last letter are true."

"After the legislature of 1892 convened, Sen. A. T. Goodwin introduced a bill in the senate which passed that body by a good majority. The next day the friends of Governor Jones had the bill re-considered and killed. Why was this done? Because Gov. Jones said if the bill passed the house he would sign it and then resign. Sen. Goodwin afterwards ask him if he had said so and he admitted that he had. Sen. Goodwin then had a protest spread up on the minutes of the senate and it is recorded in the journal—the 4th section of said protest reads as follows:

"Honesty believeth that stupendous frauds were committed in the management and returns of the election held in August 1892, by which the result of that election was changed, we have felt constrained by duty to the people and obligated to honest government to insist upon the passage of this measure, and most solemnly protest in the name of honesty, justice and the fair name of our beloved state against permitting this blot upon its escutcheon to remain without a fair and just adjudication of the questions involved in the issue made by the respective parties or factions in this state."

Congressman Clayton Here Today.

Hon. and Mrs. Henry D. Clayton, of Eufaula, are here today. They came last night and left this afternoon. While here Mr. Clayton made a splendid address to the public school.

Court being in session and in the midst of a murder trial, Mr. Clayton did not make his usual public speech.

Mr. Clayton is chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the present congress, and ranks as one of the leading democratic congressmen. He has been in congress sixteen years, and will probably be a candidate again next year to succeed himself. We regret that Mr. Clayton could not remain longer with us on his tour of his district.

Will Wilks Trial.

The trial of Will Wilks for killing G. N. Bowdoin began on yesterday and is at this writing not ended.

It will be recalled that Mr. Wilks and General Bowdoin had a difficulty about four years ago which resulted in the death of Bowdoin. The case has been continued several times by the state and hence the delay in the trial. The trial will probably end today.

Electric Power For Pike County.

Troy, Sept. 25.—Troy will some time in the future be furnished with electric power from Pea River at Elba. The Tuscaloosa Supply and Concrete Company of Tuscaloosa will build the dam for the Pea River Power Company at Elba for $150,000. The dam will be twenty-five feet high and of reinforced concrete.

Hon. Chas. Henderson is financing the movement. Two thousand horse power will be developed at Elba making one of the best water power plants in the country.

It is the intention of the company to supply Troy, Dathan and surrounding cities with their electric power. And in the future electric lines may be run connecting the cities of South Alabama.

LOST—On the streets of Elba, one silver purse and silver card case. Purse contained about $2.50 and card case contained several visiting cards of my name. Reward if returned to Miss Sue Rainier.

Work On Dam Begins.

Engineers McGeehan and Jones of Tuscaloosa, came here last week and are examining the site and formulating the plans for the construction of the dam across Pea River, 4 miles south of here, the contract of which was signed up some few weeks ago.

They began work Monday morning fixing bridges, etc., and it is stated that they will build a traction road starting at the depot and extending to the site over which the machinery and other materials will be carried.

If We Knew.

Could we but draw back the curtains, That surround each other's lives, See the naked heart and spirit.

Know what spur the action gives, Often we should find it better. Fuller than we judge we should; We should love each other better, If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motive, See the good and bad within, Often we should love the sinner, All the while we loathe the sin. Could we know the powers working To overthrow integrity, We should judge each other's errors With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials, Knew the effort all in vain, And the bitter disappointment, Understood the loss and gain, Would the grimest roughness Seem, I wonder, just the same?

Should we help, where now we hinder? Should we pity where we blame? Ah! We judge each other harshly, Knowing not life's hidden force, Knowing not the fount of action, Least we build it at its source. Seeing not amid the evil, All the golden grains of good; O! we'd love each other better, If we only understood.

The Turkey Cure For Carpillars.

Paris green and arsenic are not in the same class with turkeys when it comes to destroying the cotton worm. Sam T. Smith, a farmer of Enterprise has furnished an experience to other farmers which will be of much value.

The following letter from Dr. C. A. Cary, state veterinarian sets forth the facts of Mr. Smith's experience.

"We have heard many good remedies for the cotton leaf worm, but Mr. Sam T. Smith, of Enterprise, Ala., has found the best remedy in profit and effectiveness."

"Mr. Smith had fifteen acres of cotton which the worms had started to eat up. But every parasite has its enemy. Mr. Smith and Mrs. Smith are, and have been for years, lovers of poultry, good hogs and other good live stock."

"This good year at the opportune time Mr. and Mrs. Smith had sixty-five turkeys and they turned these sixty-five turkeys loose in the fifteen acres of cotton and they actually ate up all of the worms and picked those out of the webs after they had gone into the more active stage."

"Now, if four and one-third turkeys (young, juicy growing turkeys) will clean and keep clean one acre of cotton from cotton leaf worms and if said turkeys grow and get fat, why not go into the diverse farming business and raise more turkeys that will sell for 20 to 25 cents a pound?"

"More home-raised, Alabama bred poultry, hogs, horses, mules, cattle and sheep would make the Alabama farmer independent of the parties who attempted to control the selling price of cotton until it gets out of the hands of the producer. Then the cotton producer (the farmer who diversifies and lives at home,) would not be forced to borrow money in order to hold his cotton or to pay his debts and hold his cotton." Kissing In Public Illegal.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 19.—Kissing one's wife or husband in public places in Kansas City, Kas., is illegal, according to a decree issued today by Judge Carlisle of the municipal court.

Judge Carlisle fined Ben Shance and his wife $100 each for kissing each other in Shawnee Park last night.

"I always thought a woman could kiss her husband whenever she pleased," Mrs. Shance said. "What is the use of being married if you can't love your husband? We haven't any home, so we go to the park when we finish work."
